The College of Liberal Arts

With all the tendency toward specialization which has entered into the course of college study in the last few years, the College of Liberal Arts is still doing business at the same old stand. And business is decidedly on the upward trend.

The College of Liberal Arts must grow as specialization in education increases or the University idea must be given up. Without a College of Liberal Arts you may have a group of loosely related separate schools, but specialized schools have so little in common that they would scarcely hold together as an educational unit unless they had a centralizing force to hold them together. The common meeting ground of the whole University is the College of Liberal Arts.

The College of Liberal Arts realizes the necessity for and the good of technical training, both for the individual and for the State. But the University idea must strive against the too great narrowing of such training. The University idea, as opposed to the isolated and unrelated school idea of organization, centers around the College of Liberal Arts. It contends against intellectual and professional provincialism in every form, particularly against the self-satisfaction of narrowly confined proficiency.

Such is the meaning of the term "general culture," which traditionally the College of Liberal Arts claims as its province. The aim—acquiring a cultured or broad point of view—never changes. The means through which the point of view may be acquired may vary. The problem of the College of Liberal Arts is to translate the aim in the terms of the widened study material of the modern world.

The 129th Commencement

The one hundred and twenty-ninth Commencement, featured by the record number of graduates sent out into the life of the State and Nation and by the determination of the alumni to participate more fully in the future development of the University, came to an end Wednesday, June 11, at noon, when a total of 283 graduates received their diplomas and took their places in the ranks of the 11,000 living sons and daughters who have gone forth from Alma Mater's doors.

Alumni Achievement

The most distinctive feature of the occasion was the business meeting of the Alumni Association held in Memorial Hall, at which Secretary Grant and representatives of the Association wiped out a $5,000 deficit accumulated in setting up the Central Office, projected a plan sponsored by the Class of 1924 and the Alumni Loyalty Fund for the raising of a $1,000,000 endowment fund by the 150th anniversary of the University, and installed a new set of officers to carry forward the affairs of the Association for the coming year.

Throughout the meeting ran the conviction that the alumni, constituting, with the trustees, the faculty, and the student body, a great fourth unit in the University's complete organization, should henceforth work unitedly, informedly, and purposefully to the end that the University should at all times go forward and make increasingly larger contributions to the life of the students and the State for whose services it was established.

Held apart from the reunion exercises, the meeting was devoted exclusively to the consideration of alumni business, with the result that the Association rests on a basis today which assures a greater, finer University for the future.

The Out-of-Staters

To Dr. R. P. Pell and the hundred-odd out-of-Staters who put on a special program on the evening of Alumni Day, the University is peculiarly indebted on two counts. Never has a larger group of her sons and daughters who have gone beyond the borders of the State returned to pay tribute to her, and rarely has so fine a service been done as that performed by Messrs. Pell, Horne, Lane, Graham, and Terry, who reviewed her career under the guidance of Battle, Winston, Alderman, Venable, and Graham. The addresses were so notable that they are being printed by the University and copies will be distributed by the Central Office to the alumni generally.

The Alumni Catalogue

For the first time since 1889 the University is on the eve of having a fairly complete, reliable catalogue of its former students. The Central Office announces that on July first it will send to press the material concerning 8,000 or 10,000 of the alumni, and that on October 12th it will deliver copies to all who place orders.

Two thousand copies are to be printed and orders at $5 per copy are now being taken. Alumni will find the catalogue of unusual interest and should place their orders at once.

To Speak or Not to Speak

One of the questions debated at various alumni meetings held at the University during the year has been that of having speeches at the alumni luncheon. Happily, the opponents seem to have won, and at this occasion the six hundred folk who sat down to dinner in Swain Hall had the best meal ever served them there, were enlivened by the band and the antics of the reunion classes, and went away grateful to those who had eliminated the oratory, having passed through the event with nothing more than the extension of brief, happy greetings from Columbia University, an announcement concerning the Hume Cup, and the passage of resolutions in memory of the University's illustrious dead.

The long-wished-for has happened, and long may the precedent prevail!

What Do You Think of Them?

Two suggestions made by alumni at the business meeting are herewith passed on to our readers: (1) Should Freshmen and Sophomores be assigned to Freshman and Sophomore dormitories rather than being permitted to room indiscriminately with upper-classmen? and (2) Should Commencement be made a week-end event so that it will not run so far into the middle of the week? Both questions were propounded at the alumni meeting and appropriate committees were appointed to consider them. What do you think of them?

The Hume Cup

Alumni who were so fortunate as to come under the instruction of the late Dr. Thomas Hume, of the department of English, will be gratified to know that a prize in the form of a cup is being provided in his memory to be competed for by North Carolina high schools which publish high school newspapers. The competition will be under the direction of a faculty committee working through the Division of Extension and the cup will go annually, as the Aycock debate cup does, to the school which shows greatest excellence in high school journalism.

The proposers of the plan are to be congratulated on the form which the memorial takes and the service it will perform in tying the high school editors closer to the University.

To Our New Officers

To our new officers, Messrs. W. N. Everett, '86, president; C. F. Harvey, '92, first vice-president; C. W. Tillet, '09, second vice-president; and F. E. Winslow, '09, J. W. Umstead, '09, R. H. Lewis, '98, Leslie Weil, '95, A. B. Andrews, '93, S. E. Shull, '00, T. B. Higdon, '08, Frank Coxe, '23 and L. H. Hodges, '19, directors, THE REVIEW extends greetings and congratulations.

The hour has struck, in THE REVIEW's opinion, when the Alumni Association is to settle down to a fine, constructive program of service to the University. Accordingly, it takes this occasion to felicitate these gentlemen in coming into the position of alumni leadership at such a time as this, and to wish them unbounded success in all that they initiate and carry through in Alma Mater's behalf.

The Class of 1924

THE REVIEW has not been able to follow the record of the Class of 1924 through all of its career at the University and it cannot attempt to assess the value of its achievements on the campus.

Nevertheless, THE REVIEW has been greatly impressed with two actions taken by it and wishes to commend them not only to the classes which will come after, but to those which have gone before. The setting aside of the final week of the term as "Senior Week" during which alumni plans and relationships were considered, was eminently worth while; and in sponsoring the endowment insurance program in order that $1,000,000 may be accumulated by the 150th anniversary of the University, an example has been set which all alumni are urged to follow.

The Law School

The action taken by the trustees of the University in electing to the deanship of the Law School Mr. Merton L. Ferson, Dean of the Law School of George Washington University and lecturer in the Law School of the University of Michigan, settles and settles properly, one of the most important questions recently demanding attention by the University and insures the growth here of a school which will be developed in keeping with the best standards of American legal education.

Dean Ferson comes to the University with a fine background of experience as a teacher and administrator, he possesses an unusually attractive personality, and the University has every reason to look forward to the rapid growth of the Law School under his direction.

In its issue for December, THE REVIEW expressed the hope that in filling this position the trustees would take a course similar to that which has been taken, and it herewith congratulates them and the University.

Shall Students Drink?

The final days of Commencement were filled with unusual excitement for students, faculty, and trustees over the question of student drinking. On Thursday night preceding Commencement, two students, having completed their work for graduation, decided to celebrate with whiskey. One took two drinks and went to bed without becoming drunk or making a disturbance. The other's conduct was such as to attract notice, with the result that both cases came to the attention of the Student Council. Inasmuch as the Student Council had disbanded, its members who were still at the University brought the cases to the attention of the faculty executive committee, which, in turn, acting under an express rule of the trustees which allows the faculty no discretion in such cases, dismissed the students without allowing them to receive their diplomas. Following the action of the committee, the student who had taken only two drinks and had not become disorderly, appealed to the faculty, but the faculty by a fairly large majority sustained the committee. On Tuesday at the meeting of the trustees, the student appealed to the trustees, and the decision of the faculty was overruled, and the student given his degree. At the same time the trustees passed a resolution approving the action of the faculty.

That the question has been widely discussed, goes without saying, and it is not THE REVIEW's intention to prolong the discussion. But there are three observations which it is impelled to make here: (1) For years questions of discipline have rested, and properly, in the hands of the faculty and student representatives, and the precedent of hastily considered trustee action is charged with grave danger; (2) The difficulty of enforcing the regulation against drinking which has been an extremely baffling one, has been made manifold more difficult; and (3) Many fathers and mothers throughout North Carolina who wish to entrust their sons to Alma Mater will, as a result of this action, think twice before they send them here.

The function of the University of North Carolina is primarily to assist men in laying well the foundations of character, and THE REVIEW doesn't believe that the step taken by the trustees in setting this precedent is one in that direction.

The Coeds

A glance at the section of the Commencement program entitled "Medals, prizes, and fellowships," discloses the fact that the 80-odd young women in the University carried off by far more than their proportionate share of University honors. Miss Katherine E. Wilson won the Early English Text Society prize; Miss Mary L. Henley the Hunter Lee Harris Medal; Miss Lucy F. Lay the Mitchel W. Buchan scholarship in philosophy and the J. W. Bailey North Carolina Club prize; Miss Frances Gray the fellowship in playmaking; and Misses Catherine Gilbert and Anna F. Liddell the Graham Kenan fellowships in philosophy. The women were also strongly represented in the list of those who received the University's highest degree in course—the Ph.D.—this going to Misses Irene Dillard and Anna F. Liddell.

Shall the Prophecy be Fulfilled

During Commencement Dr. F. H. Giddings, speaking in the vernacular of New England, said he was willing to risk his "gumption" on a prophecy to the effect that the University of North Carolina has it within its power to become, within the next generation, the leading educational institution in the United States as concerns intellectual and creative qualities.

The reasons on which he based the prophecy were: Climatically and topographically North Carolina comprises a midway area in which the best of the North and South can meet and work unhindered by extremes of heat or cold. Its population, untrammelled by binding traditions or too complex social conditions, is more typically American than that of any of its sisters, being free alike from excessive numbers of negroes or foreign elements which constitute a serious burden to the states of the lower South and North respectively. A faculty of distinction is already on the ground and seemingly is allowed to devote itself to the making of a great institution by a board of trustees liberal in policy, indisposed to interfere in matters of internal administration, and effective in providing legislative support. And finally, Chapel Hill is becoming, and may become still more, a beautiful and delightful place to which folk of intellectual ideals will resort to find opportunity for creative work and expression.

That's the prophecy. The question for all of those who constitute the University is, Shall the prophecy be fulfilled?

Our Illustrious Dead

Since our last issue the University has lost through death two of her most distinguished sons, Walter Clarke, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, and Locke Craig, Governor of the State from 1913 to 1917.

THE REVIEW shall make no attempt here to estimate the services which these two men rendered the University and the State which they loved and to which they devoted the full measure of their bodies, minds, and hearts. At no hour during the past three decades have they failed to give to the State service of the highest distinction, and while the University has sustained a profound loss in their passing, it is a loss shot through with pride in the achievement which was theirs.

The death of Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, head of the department of English at the U. S. Naval Academy, also brings to the University a profound sense of loss, not because Dr. Smith was an alumnus of the University, but because as professor of English and first dean of the Graduate School here from 1903 to 1909 he completely caught the spirit of Carolina and became a part of her finer life and traditions. The formal establishment of the Graduate School and the founding of Studies in Philology were achieved under his direction; the University library was the beneficiary of his constant aid as a member of the book committee; and since his connection with other institutions his interest in the University's welfare has continued unabated. Throughout the ranks of the faculty and alumni, as well as throughout the State at large, his death will be the occasion of genuine sorrow.

Index to the Review

Notice is herewith given to readers of THE REVIEW that an index to volumes 1 to 12 inclusive is now in the hands of the printers and will be supplied upon request to all subscribers who wish copies of it who have complete or partially complete files. It has been prepared by Miss Cornelia Spencer Love, of the University library, and makes easily accessible all the material which has appeared in THE REVIEW during the past twelve years.

COMMENCEMENT SETS SEVERAL PRECEDENTS

As commencements come and go the one hundred and twenty-ninth seems destined to be recorded as one of the most noteworthy in University history.

It was distinguished by several outstanding accomplishments: It sent out into the State and nation a record number of graduates—283; it witnessed the return for the first time of the out-of-state alumni as a group, and they came in large numbers; it took definite steps toward putting the General Alumni Association on a permanent basis, and finally, but not least important, it marked the inauguration of a plan to present to Alma Mater a gift of $1,000,000 on her 150th birthday. Judging by the warm response to various proposals, it marked the beginning of a new and happy era in University-alumni relations.

Most of the homecoming classes took advantage of the three-day reunion program, in vogue this year for the first time, and came back early. This made it possible to hold most of the class dinners Monday night, the eve of Alumni Day, and thus clear the deck for more general participation in Tuesday's activities.

The entire commencement program moved smoothly. The separation of the business meeting of the General Alumni Association and the general reunion of classes on Alumni Day left no doubt as to the wisdom of the change, which will probably be made permanent. Another moot question was apparently definitely settled: the Alumni Luncheon was given over mostly to class stunts rather than speechmaking, and here again was a plan that met with general approval.

Opening Exercises

The graduating exercises were opened with the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, June 8, which was preached by the Rev. Henry D. Phillips, rector of the Trinity Church of Columbia, S. C. Taking his text from the sixth chapter of the epistles to the Hebrews, first verse, "Wherefore let us cease to speak of the first principles of Christ and press on unto full growth," he said the great need of the world today is men capable of doing honest, vigorous thinking upon a higher plane. He made a powerful plea for a well-rounded development of the individual. He was introduced by President Chase.

The annual Y. M. C. A. sermon under the Davie Poplar was delivered Sunday night by Dr. W. D. Moss, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, who urged the graduates to live honestly.

Class Day Exercises

Class day exercises were held Monday. Robed in cap and gown, the seniors gathered in front of Memorial Hall Monday morning and marched to Gerrard Hall where farewell prayer services were conducted by Professor Horace Williams.

Next came the Mangum medal contest in oratory in which three seniors competed. They were George Hampton, of Chapel Hill; M. A. James, of Asheville, and C. A. Peeler, of Salisbury. George Hampton was announced as the winner at the closing exercises Wednesday morning. The orations of Mr. Hampton and Mr. James were strong pleas for America's entrance into an international court of justice, while Mr. Peeler urged more education for the negro.

Rain put a crimp in the faculty alumni baseball game on Emerson field and forced the graduating class to smoke the peace pipe in Memorial Hall instead of under the Davie Poplar as is customary.

President and Mrs. Chase received the seniors in the afternoon following which the class exercises were held and the spot light was thrown on the merits and foibles of its 150 members. The class history was read by Miss Bessie Davenport, of Pineville. The class prophecy was foretold by Miss Kittie Lee Frazier, of Raleigh. The last will and testament was by J. Osler Bailey, of Raleigh, and Earle Hartsell, of Stanfield, read the class poem. Presiding was W. W. Gwynn, of Leaksville, president. In a short talk Jack Allsbrook, of Roanoke Rapids, turned the student government over to his successor, William Cocke, of Asheville. Abram Weil, of Goldsboro, presented the class gift, an endowment insurance policy for the university.

Showing the academic procession entering Memorial Hall for the final exercises of the University's 129th Commencement. The procession formed in front of the Alumni Building and, headed by the University band, marched across the campus.

The first gathering of out-of-state alumni was held at a dinner Monday night, when short talks were made by representatives from each group. All expressed amazement at the rapid growth of the University as well as the village.

The Dialectic Literary Society was the winner of the annual inter-society debate, also held Monday night.

Alumni Day Program

The general assembly of the Alumni Association and the general reunion of the different classes were held Tuesday morning of Alumni Day. The Alumni Luncheon in Swain Hall was unusually well-attended. There were many class demonstrations and little speech-making—a program that seemed to be thoroughly enjoyed. Dr. F. H. Giddings, head of the department of Social Science of Columbia University brought the crowd to its feet when in the course of a short talk he said:

"It is not news to you, but it gives me pleasure to say that the University of North Carolina is everywhere recognized as one of the half dozen educational institutions in the country that lead and do not wait to follow."

George Stephens of Asheville announced a trophy cup to be given in memory of the late Professor Thomas Hume for the best high school paper published during the year. The cup will cost approximately $500 and will be given by the former students of Dr. Hume, who was for many years a member of the faculty of the University. The contest is to be conducted under the auspices of the University Extension Division. The only condition is that high school papers competing must publish a sketch of the life and services of Dr. Hume. Subscriptions of $10.00 will be solicited to provide a fund for the prize.

Much fun was provided on Emerson Field in the afternoon when the "Reds," composed of reunion classes ending in final numeral "9," and the "Whites," composed of those ending in "4," clashed in a pushball contest. Decision as to winners was not rendered.

Out-of-State Speakers

The features of the evening program were the final meeting of the out-of-state group and a performance by the Carolina Playmakers. In twelve minute talks five prominent out-of-state alumni undertook to cover the University's administration and its significance under each of its former presidents since the reopening following the Civil War. Each talk was by an alumnus who was an undergraduate during the period he discussed. Owing to a recent illness President Chase was unable to attend the dinner as he had planned, but he sent a message heartily congratulating the group on the success of its first reunion.

The different periods discussed were the administrations of Battle (1875-1890), by Dr. Robert P. Pell, member of the class of '81, who is president of Converse College, South Carolina, and chairman of the out-of-state reunion program; Winston (1891-1897), by Dr. Herman Harrell Horne, '95, professor of the history of education in New York University; Alderman (1897-1901), by Benjamin Benson Lane, '99, principal of the Crescent City schools, Créscent City, Fla.; Venable (1901-1914), by Frank Porter Graham, '09, member of the faculty of the University now on leave of absence; Graham (1914-1918), by John S. Terry, '18, editor of The School, of New York City.

The Carolina Playmakers presented two plays, "The Wheel" by Ernest Thompson, of Goldshoro, an expressionistic play of modern college life and "Fixin's," a tragedy of the tenant farmer, by Paul and Erma Green, of Chapel Hill.

Hamlin Delivers Address

Wednesday was Commencement Day. The academic procession formed in sections in front of the Alumni Building and headed by the University band marched to Memorial Hall, in which the graduating exercises were held. President Chase presided. In the absence of Governor Morrison, who was in Asheville attending the funeral of former Governor Craig, the 283 diplomas were presented by Dr. R. H. Lewis, of Raleigh.

Sixty-five students won higher degrees—a record number for the Graduate School. Six were awarded the Ph.D. degree, including two women students, this being the first time in the history of the University that this degree in course was awarded to women. They were Miss Anna Forbes Liddell of Charlotte and Miss Irene Dillard, of Clinton, S. C.

Honorary degrees were conferred on one woman and five men of prominence as follows: Doctor of laws, Franklin Henry Giddings, professor of sociology and the history of civilization in Columbia University; John Matthews Manly, professor and head of the department of English in the University of Chicago; Thomas Gilbert Pearson, of New York City, lecturer, writer and administrator in the practical fields of ornithology; William

Jackson Adams, associate justice of the North Carolina Supreme court; degree of honorary civil engineer, Charles S. Hamlin, of the Federal Reserve Board, who delivered Commencement address.

Charles Upham, chief engineer of the North Carolina Highway Commission; doctor of letters, Olive Tilford Dargan, author and poet.

The commencement address was delivered by Charles S. Hamlin, member of the Federal Reserve Board and formerly Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Hamlin's address was devoted largely to a plea for less selfishness among peoples, states and nations. "A great problem facing the world today," he said, "is the relation of individuals to society,—the individual man as opposed to the general welfare of the community. College graduates can do much to make this relation clear, and to mold public opinion on great public questions. Public opinion is too often molded by selfish interests, and to point out the true interest of the community is a problem in solving which college men should take the lead. Every college man should keep abreast of public affairs, and should devote at least some part of his time to the service of his country."

Mr. Hamlin took a hard fling at Izrael Zangwill, noted English playwright and novelist, who on a recent visit to this country said America in entering the war was actuated by selfish motives and that Woodrow Wilson failed to comprehend the character of the American people. Mr. Hamlin did not call the Englishman by name, but left no doubt as to his identity.

SOUTH BUILDING BELL CRACKS AND COBB FINDS PREDECESSOR

The old bell in the South Building cracked last month and was silent for the first time in 68 years.

The University is planning to mend the old relic, to restore it its metallic health. It will be sent back to the foundry where it was made, there to be welded or recast. It will be saved to University tradition, to continue as the center of college legend and history. Meanwhile the bell in the Presbyterian church has been pressed into service as the campus' official announcer.

The disablement of the South Building bell has brought about the discovery of its predecessor, the bell that used to hang in the belfry which was burned in 1856. Professor Collier Cobb last month went on a trip of exploration and unearthed the first bell in the Durham Foundry and Machine Works. John Kerr, proprietor of the foundry, said he would return it to the University as a gift. This bell was bought and installed soon after the University opened in 1795.

This recalls the story in connection with the return of the tablet what was stolen from the cornerstone of the Old East building and found many years later in a foundry in Tennessee.

UNIVERSITY ANNUAL IS DEDICATED TO SCALES

The 1924 volume of the Yackety-Yack, the University annual, which recently came from the press, is dedicated to Alfred Moore Scales, '92, prominent attorney of Greensboro.

Robert S. Pickens, of Hickory, now editor and proprietor of the Hickory Daily Record, is editor-in-chief. He married and left college at Easter and the work of completing the book devolved on Spencer Murphy of Salisbury, who has been elected editor of next year's annual.

Abram Weil of Goldsboro and Charles Yarley, of Atlanta, Ga., were business managers.

Mrs. Robert S. Pickens, of Hickory (nee Miss Vinon Liddell of Charlotte), was sponsor of the volume.

The Separk Poetry Cup, given annually by the Fine Arts Department of the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs, has been won by Mrs. Paul Green '19, of Chapel Hill, formerly Miss Elizabeth Lay of Raleigh. Mrs. Green's poem was "Twilight."

REUNION CLASSES ENJOY THREE-DAY PROGRAM

Graham and Fries

Members of the class of 1869 back for their fifty-fifth anniversary were: Alexander Graham, Charlotte, and John W. Fries, Winston-Salem.

Forty-fifth for 1879

Among members of 1879 back were: Francis D. Winston, Windsor; Robert W. Winston, Chapel Hill; Dr. John M. Manning, Durham; James Moore, Raleigh, and Ernest P. Maynard, Raleigh.

Jim Stowd Serves '84

Eleven members of 1884 returned for their fortieth anniversary.

Dr. F. P. Venable was guest of honor at the class dinner, which was served by Jim Stowd, leading caterer of the village. Dr. Venable came to the University as professor of chemistry simultaneously with the entry of the class in 1880 and has remained in the University's service continuously since. Interesting reminiscences were swapped and high tribute was paid to faculty members of the '80's, among them Battle, Mangum, Hooper, Winston, Graves, Gore, Holmes, Manning and others. Collier Cobb, an invited guest, was elected to membership in the class.

James Lee Love, president, presided at the reunion program of the class in Gerrard Hall on Alumni Day, and Dr. S. B. Turrentine made an eloquent talk.

Those present were: John A. Anthony, Shelby, teacher, legislator, lawyer; John L. Borden, Goldsboro, manufacturer; Heriot Clarkson, Charlotte, lawyer, associate justice of the Supreme Court; Samuel M. Gattis, Hillsboro, secretary of the class, lawyer; Silas A. Holeman, High Point, R.F.D., teacher, banker, farmer; J. P. Kerr, State College, Raleigh, farmer, teacher; Adam A. Klutz, Chapel Hill, retired business man; Jas. Church, South, president Greensboro College for Women; Zeb V. Walser, Lexington, lawyer, former Attorney General of North Carolina; Julian Wood, Edenton, farmer, fisherman and business man.

Members of '89 Scarce

Brevard Nixon, Charlotte, and George S. Steele, Rockingham, were the only two members of 1889 who signed the alumni register. Neither could be located when Judge Winston called for representatives of '89 at their turn in Gerrard Hall.

Class of 1894

The members of 1894 back for their 30-year reunion included: Chas L. Van Noppen, Greensboro; S. A. Hodgkin, Greensboro; G. E. Petty, Greensboro; Benjamin Wyche, Charlotte; Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., Chapel Hill. Benjamin Wyche was spokesman for the class at the general reunion in Gerrard Hall.

Big Comeback for 1899

With twenty-seven of its forty-three living graduates and five of its non-graduates in attendance, the Class of 1899 crammed the occasion of its 25th anniversary full of interest and genuine homecoming happiness.

E. D. Broadhurst, of Greensboro, served as toast master at the special class banquet held at Gooche's Cafe Monday night; Col. Fred Coxe, of

Class History for '04

More than 20 members of 1904 returned. They were Fred Archer, Superintendent of Schools, Greensboro; Albert Cox, lawyer, Raleigh; William Dunn, Jr., lawyer, New Bern; F. H. Gregory, banker, Halifax; A. W. Haywood, lawyer, New York City; T. F. Hickerson, member of the University faculty; Lawrence Holt, Director of Cotton Mills, Burlington; R. C. Holton, Superintendent of Schools, Route 1, New Bern; Dr. W. P. Jacocks, with the International Health Board, New York City; Sam Peace, banker, Henderson; J. H. Pearson, sales manager Western Electric Company, Charlotte; W. C. Rankin, real estate dealer, Charlotte; Burton Smith, electrical engineer, Norfolk, Va.; M. C. Staten, lawyer, Tarboro; H. W. Winstead, tobaccoist, Roxboro; G. H. Alford, Holly Springs. The class held its first get-together meeting at a dinner in the Presbyterian social rooms.

The class decided to publish a history including every man, graduate or not. Officers for the next five years were elected as follows: Albert L. Cox, president; A. W. Haywood, vice-president; T. F. Hickerson, secretary.

Hats Off to 1909

Class officers or committees who want to know how to get a good sized delegation back for reunions are referred to 1909, which returned 45 of its 88 living members and therefore gets the prize for attendance of classes graduated more than five years ago although '99 begs leave to recall that it had back 27 of its 43 living graduates and five of its non-graduates.

The plan that 1909 used to get its men back was simple enough: John Umstead, of the reunion committee, began bombarding the members with letters early in the spring and, firing a reminder at them every few days, he never let up until a record number was lined up at Commencement. Other members of the reunion committee were O. J. Coffin, J. H. Manning, K. D. Battle and C. W. Tillett, Jr. Incidentally, this class also reported that 77 of its 88 living members had already filled in and returned their questionnaires to the Central Alumni Office.

New officers were elected as follows: John Hall Manning, Raleigh, president; John W. Umstead, Durham, secretary-treasurer. The following committee was appointed to begin preparations for the 20-year reunion: John Hall Manning, John W. Umstead, C. W. Tillett, Charlotte; Donald Clement, Salisbury; K. D. Battle, Rocky Mount.

The class will hold an informal reunion next year, and while no special

1914 Has Big Delegation

More than thirty members of 1914 were back for their ten-year reunion, composing one of the largest reunion delegations. The number attending was much larger than at the five-year reunion, since many of the '14 men had not returned from military service or were in a state of readjusting themselves after the war.

The class banquet was held at the "Cabin," with 26 members present. John S. Cansler, of Charlotte, presided in the absence of J. Albert Holmes, who found at the last minute he would not be able to attend.

Oscar Leach, Raleigh, permanent secretary, brought up several business matters, among them a recommendation from the General Alumni Association that a change in officers each five years would be advisable, and he presented his resignation, which was tabled until the next reunion of the class.

Each member of the class gave a brief review of his life since leaving the University and reports were given of the activities of many members who were absent and whose whereabouts and activities were known.

Members of the class were quartered in the Manly Building and staged celebrations and jollifications day and night. A photograph was taken at the Old South Building Tuesday at 1 o'clock.

Judge J. Lloyd Horton, Farmville, of the North Carolina Superior Court, represented the class in the talk-fest held in Gerrard Hall Tuesday, presenting the members after a brief review of the activities.

Members of the class present at the banquet Monday night included Miss Julia M. Alexander, Law, Charlotte; Lucius H. Ranson, Charleston, S. C.; Dr. O. B. Bonner, High Point; Dr. R. B. McKnight, Rochester, Minn.; Dr. A. W. James, Hamlet; Carl D. Taylor, Pittsburgh, Penn.; Oscar Leach, Raleigh; R. Grady Shoaf, Lexington; Kenneth Royall, Goldsboro; J. T. Pritchett, Lenoir; Dr. J. G. Umstead, Jr., B. K. Blalock.

Others who came in during the commencement included Blake D. Applewhite, Wilmington; J. Ira Lee, Benson; J. Grover Lee, Durham; W. R. Thompson, Pittsboro; Dr. C. W. Eley, Portsmouth, Va.; Lenoir Chambers, Jr., Greensboro; Dr. C. W. Millander, Asheville.

Members of the class stood for a moment in silence in memory of members of the class who have died since graduation, including Seymour Whiting, Isaac R. Strayhorn, E. J. Perry and C. N. Gibbs.

Innovation of '18 Successful

The first informal reunion of 1918 was a success. When the class held its five-year pow-wow in 1923 it declared in favor of an informal reunion each year. This was an innovation and the outcome was watched with interest by other classes. In keeping with the idea that no member should be made to feel that he was under a sort of compulsion to come back every year no letters were written urging attendance.

Quite a number came back, however, among them John Terry, president, Anna Forbes Liddell, Minor Gwynn, Claude Currie, Victor Bryant, C. Holding, Harding Butt, Albert Coates, Robert Madry, Dougald McMillan, George Lay, Curtis Crissman, Martha Dough-ton, Roland McClamroch, and H. H. Weeks.

Through the courtesy of Anna Forbes Liddell the class dinner was held in her home, "The Collar Box," on West Franklin street. Bobbie Wunsch, now of the Junior High School, Greensboro, sent word he desired to relinquish his portfolio as secretary, and Harding Butt was elected in his place.

The class was proud of the fact that it could list among its number Miss Liddell, the first woman candidate to pass an examination for the Ph.D. degree which the University bestowed upon her at Commencement.

So successful did the campus view '18's informal reunion that the class of '09 decided to hold one next year.

1919 Very Active

The class of of 1919 held its reunion dinner at the Coop. Twenty-three were present, including the wives of four members; in other words there were 19 members of '19. Arrivals Alumni Day swelled the '19 list and there were enough to fill three tables at the Alumni Luncheon. On Commencement Day the class made a pilgrimage to the cemetery and placed flowers on the graves of the late President Graham and Dean Stacy. This the class intends doing every year.

The 1919 directories came from the printers while the reunion was in progress and copies were distributed to members present. Secretary Hilton

West has sent letters along with directories to other members of the class requesting that "unlucky two-spot with the corner torn off—one dollar to pay for the directory, the other to pay class debts, past and future." Secretary West says he must raise $200 by this or some other method.

Norman Boren, now a lawyer of Greensboro, acted as spokesman for the class at the reunion of all classes in Gerrard Hall.

Discussing the reunion Secretary West, who devoted himself without stint toward making it a success, says: "I feel that those who came back enjoyed it and that they are and always will be a working nucleus. At any rate as secretary I'm not down in the mouth."

Class officers were elected for the next five years as follows: Jack Powell, president; Harold Williamson, vice-president; Hilton West, secretary-treasurer; Theodore Rondthaler, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Those present for the reunion included: P. O. Jarvis, New Bern; H. G. West, Greensboro; C. B. Taylor, Raleigh; Chas. M. Hazellurst, High Point; Ralph D. Williams, New York City; T. L. Burnett, Jacksonville, Fla.; Edward B. Jenkins, Nashville; N. G. Gooding and wife, New Bern; E. S. Lindsey, Tryon; W. F. Stokes and wife, Stokes; Luther H. Hartsell, Concord; J. W. G. ALUMNI ASSOCIATION GETS STAMP OF PERMANENCY

Secretary Grant Reports Work On Sound Basis
Sixty-five Active Groups

After two years spent in laying the foundation of the reorganized association, alumni work is now on a sound basis. Such was the gist of the annual report of Secretary Grant made to the alumni at their general assembly at Commencement.

The report struck a note of optimism never before reached by the Central Office. Secretary Grant explained that "the laying of the groundwork for an effective association was of necessity a slow process and that now, with a sound foundation on which to build, University alumni are privileged for the first time to initiate and execute as a group." He added that alumni activity and enthusiasm had within the past three months assumed greater proportions than during all the preceding 18 months combined.

65 Active Associations

The report disclosed the number of active associations in North Carolina had grown to 50, which, together with 15 outside the state, made a total of 65 with duly elected officers. It was estimated that there were 15 other groups in the state and several outside sufficiently large and compact to have active associations.

This year for the first time the business meeting of the association and the reunion program of classes were entirely separated and the prediction that under such arrangement both would be more effective was amply borne out. The general assembly (formerly called the business meeting) was held in Memorial Hall and opened at 9:30 o'clock on Alumni Day. The atmosphere of the meeting was distinctly serious and business-like and it was generally agreed that more business was transacted than at any previous gathering in alumni history. The general reunion of classes followed in Gerrard Hall.

Notable Accomplishments

The general assembly accomplished several things that will make the Commencement of 1924 one of the most notable in the University's history. It wiped out a $5,000 deficit accumulated in setting up the Central Office, projected a plan sponsored by the class of 1924 (to be put into operation

EVERETT HEADS NEW SET ALUMNI OFFICERS

W. N. Everett, '85, of Raleigh, Secretary of State, has been elected president of the General Alumni Association to succeed Walter Murphy, '92, of Salisbury.

The election of Mr. Everett and other officers was announced at the General Assembly of the Association at Commencement, following a count of 1,000 alumni votes cast by mail.

C. F. Harvey, '92, of Kinston, was elected first vice-president; C. W. Tillett, Jr., '09, of Charlotte, second vice-president.

New members of the Board of Directors elected were John W. Umstead, '09, of Durham; R. H. Lewis, Jr., '98, of Oxford; and F. E. Winslow, '09, of Rocky Mount.

President Everett, acting under authority conferred by the constitution, has since appointed six other members to the Board of Directors. They are A. B. Andrews, '93, Raleigh; T. B. Higdon, '05, Atlanta, Ga.; Frank Coxe, '23, Asheville; Leslie Weil, '95, Goldsboro; Luther H. Hodges, '19, Spray; Samuel E. Shull, '00, Stroudsburg, Pa. The first three are to serve one year and the others two.

through the Alumni Loyalty Fund) for the raising of a $1,000,000 endowment fund by the 150th. anniversary of the University, installed a new set of officers to carry on the affairs of the association and planned for its continuance on a permanent basis.

There was a report by the special committee appointed to review the work of the Central Alumni Office, an address by President Chase, and numerous discussions and resolutions. All bore striking testimony of an awakened interest in alumni work and augured well for the future of the association.

Walter Murphy Presided

Walter Murphy, of Salisbury, the retiring president, presided over half the meeting and then turned it over to Felix Harvey, of Kinston, the newly-elected first vice-president, who served in the absence of the new president, W. N. Everett, of Raleigh.

President Murphy opened the meeting and asked Secretary Grant to make his annual report. Mr. Grant in turn requested Dr. L. R. Wilson, '99, to make the report for the special committee appointed by the board of directors to review the work of the Central Office, the other members of that committee being A. B. Andrews, '93, and C. W. Tillett, '09. Dr. Wilson said in part:

Two Important Findings

This committee has gone through the Central Alumni Office in a very careful sort of way. The most important finding which it makes is this: That after these years a Central Alumni Office, manned by alumni, supported by alumni, has reached a definite conclusion, that the 11,000 sons and daughters of this institution ought to be brought together in one unit, a part of the University, and ought steadily to interest itself in behalf of the University, not merely to relieve it in the case of emergency, not merely to do certain special things, but to think in the terms of the University and its enrichment today, tomorrow and steadily from this time on.

The second finding is as to the work which the Central Office has done in bringing your name and my name and the names of the other 11,000 alumni into some order, some unity, so that we know where we are and who we are and what we are doing. As a person who has been on the campus for these past twenty-three years, who has attempted to transact business with alumni in various ways, the most distressing thing has been that when you sent out 200 letters you have had about 140 of them to come back to you. It is the most baffling sort of thing when a mother in trying to reach her children, in trying to send her greetings to her own, is unable to send the word of greeting, is unable to call that son back simply because there wasn't any machinery set up by which this intimate relationship could be maintained. The Central Office, with infinite pains, has succeeded in breaking down, reaching over that chasm, which has existed between this institution and those of us who have been away. That is, 9,000 of the 11,000 addresses have been reduced not only to paper but to metal and can be stuck in an electric addressograph, electric current turned on, and in the course of this day, if necessary, 9,000 of us could have letters started at least to us to tell us of the love of this institution, of its interest in us, and to call us together here to minister in its service.

The committee is fully convinced that a very significant piece of work has been done and has been gotten under way and that it is imminently worthy of the full support of this organization. The work should be strengthened in every conceivable way so that we can be informed about this institution, so that we can purpose in our hearts to make it the great institution it should be, so that we can help make it minister in a hundred ways that it never has before, to the men and women that come here, to the state and to the nation.

Secretary Grant's Report

Secretary Grant then made his report, which embodied the following salient points, other than those already mentioned.

The active alumni mailing list now comprises more than 9,000 names, built up from 3,000 accurate addresses available two years ago. Approximately 500 addresses are at the moment incorrect and there are about 500 others that have never been ascertained.

Alumni Catalog October

Copy for the alumni catalogue is now in the hands of the printers and the books will be ready for distribution by October 12—University Day. It will contain from 800 to 1000 pages, printed on good book paper, and will be casebound in blue with a blind seal of the University on the front and title stamped in gold across the back. The price will be not more than $5.00, figured on the basis of the sale of 2,000 volumes.

The catalogue will contain the complete alphabetical roster of University alumni from the beginning through the class of 1924, with individual records; class rosters; district, or territorial rosters; and rosters of University officers, faculty members and trustees.

THE ALUMNI REVIEW, which was taken over by the Central Office a year ago, has been increased from nine to ten issues a year, with 32 pages an issue. Considerable changes have been made in the editorial and advertising policies with results that have been gratifying. The circulation for each issue has been 4,000. Of these 3,225 went to alumni and the balance to faculty, trustees and others. In response to two statements 50 per cent. of the subscribers have paid for the current year. THE REVIEW has been more systematically handled and more enthusiastically received than ever before. The plans are to increase its quality and circulation and frequency of appearance.

On June 1st the assets of the General Alumni Association, including receipts from all sources, were $10,553.71. The liabilities were $12,937.73, leaving a gross deficit of $2,384.02.

WIPE OUT DEFICIT

Contributions made by alumni groups and individuals at commencement to wipe out the present deficit of the General Alumni Association and carry on the work until September 1 amounted to $5,450.

The contributions were made by: the class of 1909, $1,000, through John W. Umstead; New York Alumni Association, $500, through John S. Terry and A. W. Haywood; Walter Murphy, $100; Florida association, $200, through Benjamin B. Lane; A. B. Andrews, $100; Dr. R. H. Lewis, $100; John W. Fries, for the class of 1868, $100; George Stephens, $100; Maryland association, $200, through Dr. E. H. Kloman, president; Justice Heriot Clarkson, $100; Leslie Weil, $100; Felix Harvey, $100; A. W. Haywood, $100; N. A. Townsend, $100; Francis D. Winston, $100; S. S. Heide, $100 for the Alabama association; Charles Van Noppen, for the class of 1894, $100; Raleigh association, $500, through Albert Cox; Mecklenburg association, $500, through W. T. Shore; Buncombe association, $500, through Frank Coxe; Greensboro association, $200, through E. E. Rives; W. F. Taylor, for the Wayne County association, $100; W. P. Jacocks, $100; Class of 1899, through Fred Coxe, $250; Robert W. Winston, $100.

Against this deficit there was cash on hand of $505.86 and outstanding in travel advances $221.05, leaving a net deficit of $1,657.11.

The Alumni Attitude

Secretary Grant concluded:

The most significant thing in regard to this year's reunions is the home-coming for the first time of the out-of-state alumni as a group. It is astounding that nearly thirty-five per cent. of the living alumni belong to this group, most of them native North Carolinians, whose anchorage is more than an attachment to the University. The unfortunate thing I discovered in going among this group was their feeling that the University felt they were somewhat unnecessary, that they were not a part of the family; in other words were not considering them vital to the University.

The explanation is obvious. During the last 25 years the University has been engaged in one of the most persistent fights in its history to get the state of North Carolina, which founded it, to accept its proper financial obligations. This fight was a beautiful step in our development. We would not wipe it out if we could. But the point is: it was a step, and it was limited to the state. Now we have passed on, and these out-of-state alumni become doubly important, for the University influence knows no territorial confines though it be the material property of a single state.

Influence Not Confined

We have talked of a "campus contemporary with the state's borders." Despite the least desire on our part, the reflex of our statement of the case has been in many instances to isolate those who lived beyond our territorial confines. We must break down this feeling of isolation for now that the state has accepted its proper obligation the hearty support of the out-of-state alumni becomes a vital necessity in our plan to make this the greatest University in the South and one of the out-standing in the country. The interest these men have taken in the out-of-state reunion demonstrates they are worthy of the finest test of love and loyalty. . . .

University and Alumni Coöperation

In building up the Alumni Association the coöperation of the University has been most generous. Likewise the coöperation of many alumni has been generous. Several members of your Board of Directors have given their assistance without stint. But to speak of wide coöperation from the alumni group would be to smother the facts and to feign hypocrisy, which is not permissible in a group of men of our calibre. I do not criticize; I merely present the facts. . . .

So long as this work rests on the basis of an assumed loyalty, which may or may not be felt, a proper coöperation will not be obtained. I think there are two main difficulties. The first is the assumption by many that the alumni group cannot be trusted, that their interest is only a passing interest—such as interest in athletics, reunions, a good time, graduations. We have said the alumni group were capable only of paying tribute in time and money and incapable of broad decision and determination of purpose. On the other hand the alumni have made an equally serious error in assuming that the whole purpose of the association was for their gratification, for the building of a bigger University because it would reflect credit on them.

Alumni Interest Superior

The University of North Carolina has no existence outside of what it is contributing to its alumni and to the people of the state. We cannot propagate a selfish institution. We cannot have an Alumni Association which is not interested in the University's every-day development. Let the alumni make her problems their problems for I believe the interest of the average alumnus of this University is finer than the interest of your student, even of your faculty member, is finer than the interest of your legislature, which is responsible for our perpetuation. There is no more liberal interest, and when we approach our alumni on that basis the University Alumni Association will be off the rocks and it will not be necessary to come here every year and talk about the deficiency incurred on account of our Association.

That is not the popular way of looking at alumni work. When you look for institutions with this point of view you will find probably only two, and these two are the greatest institutions in America because the alumni have accepted the institutions as their own. They know every problem, every line along which it has extended. They know and they can say better than any one else how it should grow. It is on that level that the class of 1924 has launched the project to raise $1,000,000.00 for the University, not for the sake of a $1,000,000.00 but as a means of relating more closely the alumni to the University.

Privilege to Give

We do not want any man to give one moment of his time, one penny of his money, one second of his thought to alumni work unless he believes it is a privilege to do so, that it is true to his own best interest and that of his posterity.

The work that can be done by a handful of men is over. I am glad to say that the mechanical end, the formal end, has been so achieved that you have gotten full returns for money expended. As I see it it will take four years to work out the Association as we have outlined the program. I urge therefore that you get a secretary in whom you have confidence—a man whom you believe is capable of doing the job along the lines indicated and give that man assurances that he is going to have four years unhampered by financial worries. To do less is to invite the thing we have done for twenty-five years. I should like to urge that you think of the Central Office not merely in terms of a clerical office which should spend all its time in the handling of routine clerical details, but in terms of an office capable of interpreting the very best there is in alumni sentiment. If you will do that you will do something that will be a distinctive contribution amply safeguarding the future of the institution. To do less is to leave the University in the hole as it has been for a century and a quarter.

President Chase Speaks

At this juncture President Chase entered the hall and was asked to address the meeting. He said in part:

It seems clear to me that here this year is the beginning of what I might try to interpret as a new relationship between the University on the one hand and its alumni on the other. I do not know of a more loyal, faithful, interested body of alumni anywhere than the alumni of the University of North Carolina throughout the history of this institution. One has only to think of the times that the alumni again and again have come to the assistance of the Alumni Association, of the men who have given their time and efforts and money. In the times which have passed it has been necessarily the case, I think, that the relationship of the University alumni to the University has partaken largely of the character of a rescue squad to help the University when it gets into trouble financially or with the Legislature. As the University grows and develops and comes more and more to be a recognized agency of the State for carrying on a very important phase of the work of the State of North Carolina it seems to me that it is becoming increasingly clear that a re-interpretation is taking place as to just the relationship between the University and the alumni. I hope that it is going to partake less of the nature of what I call a rescue squad because I hope in the years to come the University, the problems of the University, are going to be less and less those of an emergency character, and are going to be more and more those of working out a larger and larger destiny in the State, of advancing the welfare of the State in an intelligent and far-seeing way.

CLASSES TO COME BACK WITH CONTEMPORARIES

The General Alumni Association and home-coming classes at commencement unanimously adopted the Dix Schedule for holding reunions.

This means that the classes will come back with about the same frequency, the main difference being that each will reunite with three other contemporary classes instead of under the multiple five-year system as at present. Thus over a period of 19 years, each class will return with six of its contemporary classes.

And so it seems to me that if any one thing does stand out it is that the relationship of the alumni and the University ought to be more and more a continuous relation, a relationship which partakes of the character of a study on the part of the alumni of the University's problems as they arise, a relationship which manifests itself in an understanding that deepens as the years go by as to what it is that the University is about and is trying to do, and which expresses itself in scores of ways with helpful suggestions and with intelligent criticism and with a keeping in touch with the University, which is on a twelve-month basis, year by year. It is that sort of attitude which, it seems to me, is now beginning to grow up between the University and the reorganized Alumni Association, and which will deepen, I am sure, as the years go by. And so as the type of service which the Association renders the University is changing in this way, with a broadening and deepening in this way, it seems to me that this meeting marks an important step in that transition and in that development.

Praises Grant's Work

I have seen a good bit during the last two years of the work of the Alumni Association, particularly through its Secretary here. I have felt and felt increasingly that Mr. Grant was attacking the problems of the alumni and of the Alumni Association in a most intelligent way, as I have been able to keep and have been privileged to keep in touch with the work which he has been doing. I want to say this about him to you this morning because I know him and I have got confidence in him and it is confidence based on what I have seen go on here week by week at the University, and I want to pass it on as my personal opinion about that matter.

Walter Murphy Speaks

Here the report of Secretary Grant was adopted unanimously, following which President Murphy said:

In adopting this report you committed yourself to the things set forth, and I think you ought to consider. There was a very specific recommendation as to the immediate necessity of financing the Alumni Association. I will say very frankly that if some means are not devised by which that can be done the Alumni Association will cease to function in twenty days.

There is among the alumni a group to whom the University for the past twenty years has turned when it was in distress. This group forms a considerable portion of the alumni, but we have never appealed to them without having our appeal met. This has been going on year in and year out. This small body of men has always responded. The responsibility has devolved upon them in keeping this a growing thing. I assume they would meet this need now as in the past, but I think that group ought to level the hill and spread it upon the shore. You know that many of us have returned fearful that someone is going to get up and ask for money. This has been a frequent recurrence year in and year out.

Now we want you to bear in mind this is your Association. We are merely your officials, to whom you have entrusted certain duties which we have attempted to perform honestly and conscientiously. You will pardon me if I say that no man in connection with alumni associations in this country has given more care, more honest, more genuine work than Daniel L. Grant has in his efforts trying to form a real working basis for the Alumni Association. A visit to his office will demonstrate what he has done.

Wipe Out $5,000 Deficit

Following Mr. Murphy's challenge the meeting was thrown open to a discussion of ways and means of raising funds to wipe out the deficit. Secretary Grant explained that to cover the deficit and continue the association on its present basis until September 1 would require $5,000. The budget for the following 12 months, he said, would contemplate the expenditure of $10,000.

"For the next two or three years, or until we can get this matter before the entire alumni group, the question of financing the Association must be considered as an emergency measure," Secretary Grant said. "I know that if this office is continued upon the basis upon which it has been founded it will finance itself, but in the meantime if we continue to solicit funds through the mail and advertising our need and getting no response we are harming ourselves."

John W. Umstead started the contributions toward wiping out the deficit with the announcement that the class of '09 would give $1,000 if the balance were raised. From then on, throughout the remainder of the meeting, contributions were made by a representative number of groups and individuals. The names and amounts are to be found in another column.

Stephens Offers Plan

On motion of Maxcy L. John decision was reached that a conference of presidents and secretaries of all local alumni associations be held in Chapel Hill during the latter part of September, or if this date be not deemed propitious, on the call of the President. Another motion by Mr. John that the proper authorities be instructed to provide fireproof quarters for alumni records was also adopted. On motion of R. D. W. Connor resolutions of sympathy were sent to Mrs. Locke Craig because of the death of her husband.

George Stephens of Asheville introduced a resolution asking that in the interest of alumni unity an investigation be made to determine the advisability of having freshmen and sophomores room together in the same dormitories, thus building up a class spirit. Mr. Stephens said the plan had worked with success in larger institutions of the North, particularly Yale, Harvard and Princeton. Mr. Stephens' resolution was adopted and a committee appointed.

Alfred W. Haywood explained the $1,000,000.00 endowment insurance plan, a discussion of which is to be found in another column, and which was unanimously adopted.

REPORT MOST IMPORTANT FINDING

President Walter Murphy of the General Alumni Association appointed a special committee last spring to review the work of the Central Alumni Office with the view to possible recommendations. This committee, composed of A. B. Andrews, '93, Raleigh; C. W. Tillett, '09, Charlotte, and L. R. Wilson, '99, Chapel Hill, reported at Commencement that, among other conclusions:

The most important finding of your committee is that relating to the conception of the functions of the Alumni Association, as held formerly by the alumni, and as held today by the Association as expressed by the Central Office. This difference is so fundamental and so essential to an understanding of what the Central Office has been, and is now doing, that your committee draws particular attention to it.

Prior to the organization of the Central Office, alumni work as such had been almost altogether individualistic. Ordinarily only one or two hours a year were devoted to alumni business by a group of 200 or 300 alumni at the alumni meeting on Alumni Day. The handling of reunions and the keeping of alumni records were largely in the hands of University, though nominally, alumni officers. THE ALUMNI REVIEW, the organ of the association through which the alumni were kept informed concerning the work of the University, was run by alumni representatives, the majority of whom were directly connected with the University. Special alumni campaigns such as that of 1921 were thought of as emergency efforts inaugurated by individuals or special groups and did not generally involve the whole body of alumni or proceed on the assumption that the alumni, as a fourth great part of the total University organization, should work unitedly, informedly, and purposefully to the end that the University should at all times go forward and make increasingly larger contributions to the life of the students and the State for whose service it was established.

Immediately upon its organization, September 21st, 1922, the Central Office through its Secretary and Board of Directors, proceeded to its work on the assumption that all of the 11,000 living alumni should be welded into a single University unit; that they should be kept in close touch with one another through properly functioning class and local organization; that they should be informed concerning all of the activities of the University; and that they should work unitedly in making the University in all particulars one of America's great institutions. It determined that what the alumni did or failed to do on account of inadequate organization should cease to be a perplexing problem to the University, and that, on the contrary, what the University did or failed to do should become a vital concern to the alumni.

ALUMNI PLAN BIG GIFT FOR UNIVERSITY

Reunion Classes Sponsor Proposal to Present Alma Mater Million Dollar Endowment on Her 150th Birthday

Following the lead of this year's graduates, eight reunion classes back for commencement accepted the invitation to become party to a plan to make Alma Mater a gift of $1,000,000 on her 150th birthday—1943.

The gift will be made through means of endowment insurance. Members of each class adopting the plan, as the classes return for reunions, will be invited to take out an individual, short-term insurance policy of $200, maturing on October 12, 1943. Annual premiums on each policy will be approximately $10 a year, depending upon the age of the individual.

Every class will be invited to join hands in the propagation of this project, and until a class does consider and approve the plan none of its members can be solicited for support. The decision of the class, of course, cannot be mandatory upon its members; it is recommendatory.

The cycle of reunions is run in five years. Since the first group of reunion classes considered the plan this year, each class will be provided an opportunity to do likewise, in a meeting, by June 1928.

Gets Hearty Endorsement

The plan received the unanimous and hearty endorsement of the General Alumni Association and all classes to which it was submitted at commencement. And the Alumni Loyalty Fund Council, which is to have the sole direction of the fund, was reorganized by the Board of Trustees of the University in accordance with the resolution of the General Alumni Association, which enlarges the Council and enables it to represent thoroughly every phase of University life.

The class of 1924, sponsoring the plan, presented it as an opportunity for all to make a significant gift to the University with a minimum of burden to the individual alumnus. According to the President of the class, "The million dollars is the least thing to accrue from this plan, and for this reason the emphasis should be on the successful involvement of 5,000 alumni in a close and continuing relationship with the University. We do not wish any man to buy a policy, or to urge this plan

PLATFORM OF THE PROJECT

"It would be better for this proposition to fail utterly, or never be attempted, than to succeed (in terms of dollars and cents) in the face of resentment, or slumbering opposition on the part of large numbers of alumni. Its success cannot be measured in terms of dollars. It is indeed true that the $1,000,000 available on the 12th of October, 1943, will be the smallest part of the gain to accrue from the successful involvement of the 4,000 to 5,000 alumni (necessary to raise the total) in active support, and interest in the University's continuation and proper development. Our life is evolving. This is the era of estate-building among the larger portion of our alumni. It is not desired that they burden themselves financially for the University. Alumni and Carolina should grow together. And to do so they must be joined. To be wedded genuinely requires mutual consent. No man should buy a policy until he is convinced of the wisdom and worthiness of the entire plan, and he feels that it is a privilege for him to consult the security of the future by making this small gift to the University of North Carolina—current with 5,000 other similar size gifts that together shall make an ocean.

"It is believed that this can be achieved by using four years in which to propagate the plan, allowing every class an opportunity to give it joint consideration in an atmosphere entirely free from restraint and goading of any character. The accomplishment of this is the vital concern for in its very execution the proper sort of attitude and University-Alumni relationship will be established. This will bear fruit far in excess of the $1,000,000 proposed. Let not the prospect of a million dollars stampede us. Friends of the plan and of our proper alumni relationships will please bear this in mind, for now our whole alumni work is in a plastic state. As we give it form, let us be conscious that the form may bless or curse our own efforts and the future efforts of others."

monetary contribution to the University. Alumni have been allowed to drift away from an intimate touch with Carolina and Chapel Hill. The future of the institution demands their close contact, and to secure this contact is the major purpose of this plan which asks that 5,000 alumni, already graduated, buy a policy for $200 each."

The Alumni Loyalty Fund will be the sole beneficiary in dividend earnings as well as in death and disability settlements.

Administration of the Fund

The Alumni Loyalty Fund was established eight years ago by a special act of the trustees of the University upon the recommendation of President Graham. The Council of the Fund has been increased from six to twelve, all of whom are alumni of the University, with the exception of the University President who is ex officio. Also the President and the Secretary of the General Alumni Association are members ex officio. The appointments are to be made in such manner as to assure that every department of University life will be represented.

"The fund is to be used "for the inauguration and stimulation of University life and activities and the improvement and enrichment of its student life, with the consequent enhancement of the University's service to the State and Nation, and with the especial object of serving purposes other than those for which the State ordinarily makes sufficient appropriations." The money can only be spent upon recommendation of the Loyalty Fund Council with the approval of the trustees of the University, the Council always being the initiator. Through this representative alumni Council each alumnus is assured that the particular phase of University life which is his own peculiar interest is going to receive the proper consideration, in the light of all University needs, when there is money to be expended.

Fills In the Gap

This fund contemplates needs the State does not meet. The public treasury follows existing needs; it seldom anticipates them. Hence the State unless he feels and sees the larger aspects of the effort, rather than feeling that it is another means of securing a treasury cannot be depended upon for money with which to add tone and elegance so essential to University life at the present moment.

North Carolinians generally, it is felt, have now achieved that state of material well-being that enables them to be interested in the finer things of life. And it is considered just as much a duty of the University to lead this new era as it was important in the beginning that the institution be founded.

This need is viewed as the especial and proper province of alumni activity. It is pointed out that by setting out to meet it the alumni will in no way weaken the sense of obligation of the State; rather such action will strengthen this obligation, because such alumni support will make it wise as a business proposition for the State to invest ever heavier in the University, and this demonstration of loyalty on the part of the alumni will be such a compelling power as to make it impossible for the State to forget its obligation.

Next commencement the reunion classes will be provided an opportunity to consider the plan and those adopting it will use 18-year policies, so that they, too, will mature in 1943. This process will be continued through five reunion years, ending in 1928.

New Form of Gift

Those classes graduating after 1928 will be asked to take out 25-year policies so their gifts may be made the years of the big 25-year reunions. Thus there will be not only the $1,000,000 available in 1943, but the gifts of classes succeeding 1928 falling due regularly following the making of the gift in 1943; adding annually to this fund, for the years succeeding 1943, from $100,000 to $250,000.

This is a significant departure from the method previously in vogue among University classes, but it is not without precedent in other leading institutions. A similar plan has been adopted by the classes at Harvard, Princeton, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Rutgers, and many other institutions throughout the country, and has worked everywhere with striking success as compared with other means of making gifts.

The appointment of the full reorganized Alumni Loyalty Council is awaiting a conference between President Chase of the University and

A SOUND INVESTMENT

Regarding the plan, one alumnus has written as follows:

"It appeals to me as an opportunity for the average alumnus to do what he has always wished to do but never felt quite able to do at any one time—make a worthwhile financial contribution to the University. It impresses me as being a thoroughly sound business transaction. . . . It is as a stream returning uphill to its source, adding strength to its place of origin; the alumnus gratifying the desire to voluntarily pay his money as well as his respect to the University. . . . It is an investment sure to pay dividends to each participating alumnus."

President Everett of the General Alumni Association and will be announced within the next few weeks.

As soon as the Council is constituted it will meet and arrange for means of bringing the project before each member of the classes of '24, '23, '19, '18, '14, '09, '04 and '99, which have adopted the plan. The secretaries of these classes are also preparing special messages for classmates appraising them of the work of the class at commencement and urging them to support this special project.

Advantages of Plan

The advantages of the plan are, briefly:

(1) It is safe. A fluctuation of the markets may affect the dividends, but it cannot touch the policies.

(2) The addition to the Fund through dividends will amount to as much as could reasonably be expected by means of investment and interest under any other method.

(3) The expenses of managing the Fund (clerical, postage, etc.), will be assumed by the insurance company instead of by the class.

(4) Every member of the class will feel a personal responsibility for the carrying on of his policy from year to year.

(5) The gift will be representative of the class as a whole instead of being made up by donations of a wealthy minority. The University has been relying too largely upon this latter method in the past.

PRESIDENT CHASE RECOVERED

President Chase has recovered from two operations which he underwent about the middle of May in Watts Hospital, Durham. He was able to attend most of the exercises commencement, following which he and Mrs. Chase went to Wrightsville Beach to rest for two weeks.

FERSON PICKED TO HEAD UNIVERSITY LAW SCHOOL

Merton Leroy Ferson, former Dean of the Law School of George Washington University, Washington, D. C., was elected Dean of the School of Law of the University of North Carolina at the Commencement meeting of the Board of Trustees. He succeeds the late Lucius Polk McGehee.

Other nominees were former Judge Stephen G. Bragaw, of Washington, N. C., whose name was presented by Charles Whedbee, of Hertford, and seconded by Attorney-General James S. Manning, of Raleigh, and J. C. Clifford of Dunn, nominated by G. K. Grantham and seconded by Nat Townsend, both of Dunn. President Chase presented the name of Mr. Ferson. The vote was Ferson 39; Bragaw, 13; Clifford, 3.

In selecting Mr. Ferson the trustees supported President Chase in his ambition to have as head of the Law School a man whose training combined both theory and practice.

UNIVERSITY WILL OPEN JOURNALISM DEPARTMENT

The establishment of a Department of Journalism in the University with the opening of the fall term was announced commencement following the meeting of the board of trustees.

Gerald W. Johnson, at present associate editor of the Greensboro Daily News, will be in charge. Mr. Johnson has had years of experience in every phase of newspaper work and is regarded as exceptionally well qualified to head the new department.

AUGUSTUS THOMAS IS KEEN FOR CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS

The Carolina Playmakers are elated over a telegram which Director Frederick H. Koch recently received from Augustus Thomas, president of the Producing Managers Association of America and founder of the American National Theatre. The telegram follows:

"In my opinion your theatre is more important than a state institution. At a Missouri Society dinner night before last I referred to you and your theatre as destined to lead a nation-wide movement in the rescue and restoration of the drama."

HEARD AND SEEN AT COMMENCEMENT

Whatever may be the defects of the college man or a college education, no other species of humanity has quite the same unique annual experience as the college alumnus back for commencement. I shall never forget the smile of supercilious disdain with which Carl Taylor, of the class of '14, gym instructor, watched my poor freshman attempt to turn a somersault over the horse. After a decade's absence from the Hill, Carl came back to his reunion this year and I had the satisfaction of feeling a little less embarrassed in his presence. After ten years of work and life in Pittsburgh, he says that Pittsburgh is the finest place in the world to work and North Carolina the finest place to live.

Nothing that I saw at commencement looked more natural than Oscar Leach, unchanged by the passing years, standing under the maple tree in front of Gerrard Hall, talking in his business-like way with somebody, for all the world as if it were 1913-14, and he were outlining some Athletic Association frame-up. Then to walk into the "Y" and see the Holmes Brothers hanging around the registration desk; that completed the process of turning back the hands of the clock.

By Airplanes In Five Years

The increasing prosperity of Carolina and her sons was most vividly indicated by the ever-present automobile. It will, undoubtedly, be a real problem to find a place for the cars that will come to commencement five years hence, or, possibly, we will come in airplanes then.

Captain E. E. W. Duncan lent a pleasing touch of color to the commencement crowd by his aviator's uniform, and just a hint of prophesy. Within the last few weeks Duncan has been as far west as Texas, as far north as Maine, and as far south as Pensacola, and had gone from Pittsburgh to Washington in thirty-eight minutes. Alma Mater has certainly turned out one fast son.

The Honorable William B. Umstead, of the class of '16, attorney-at-law of Durham, was present on the Hill just long enough to sign his name on the registration book, as large political interests required his constant attention and his immediate return to Durham. Some one remarked that on the basis of services rendered, Bill would be one of the outstanding men in the McLean administration. Some one else, apparently of the opposing party, said that his early departure was due to the fact that it was pay day in Durham among the politicians.

Alumni Returned Early

Apparently more alumni came back early than usual. I was much surprised to see Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Horne, on Sunday, walking as calmly down Franklin Street as if they were regular residents.

Many of us had the pleasure of seeing Frank Graham shoot by. The class of 1909 made a very dire threat that the next time they had a class reunion and anybody attempted to give Frank Graham a speech to make or a job to do, they would blow something up. They said they did not see him at all until the morning after commencement. At least he was absent from that all-night session that they had in the center section of the Old East Building, apparently trying to test out the renovation job done by T. C. Atwood, and see if the building as renovated could stand the strains that the old one stood when they were students.

New Law Dean

The students in the University law school are very happy over the decision of the trustees to stick by President Chase's recommendation that the selection of a dean be based upon a success in teaching law, rather than success in practicing law.

The President's Reception

Of all the varieties of receptions with which we are afflicted, there is one which is an unqualified pleasure. That is the reception which President Chase gives to the seniors each commencement, to which they bring their parents. To see the relationship between the boy and his parents is a source of a very peculiar joy to any one who has been interested in the son. You see at one glance the inspiration which he has had and the handicaps which he has overcome, and you feel that in most cases the University has been able to offer the son an opportunity which it has been worth his while to take. There is that fine heroism of the struggles which the State has been having in the past to be seen in the faces of the parents; and that confident ease which comes with training and more adequate resources which the young graduates offer as the basis for their hope. One cannot help but believe that the heroism will be there, too.

That Senior Poem

"The standardized product of a standardized process, Freshman at the hopper and seniors at the spout."

Thus began Earl Hartsell's poem for the senior class, concluding with, "Blessings on all the individual grains," being poured out at the machine at that time, and "above all things, blessings on the hopper itself." Comparing this senior poem with those which have gone before, filled with such images as of King Arthur's band of knights and touched with the spirit of romance, one is led to wonder whether the change is individual with Mr. Hartsell, is limited to the University of North Carolina, or is just a part of the universal matter-of-factness with which the younger generation attempts to bludgeon the sentimentality out of their elders. Regardless of the change itself, many of Carolina's sons would join in the prayer of the blessings on "this hopper," with an added petition that the blessing should take the form of delivering us from the curse of standardization and large scale production which has laid its blight on so many state universities. In spite of our name, we have not been a state university until recently, and some of the spirit and distinctness which has characterized us in the past was more closely allied to that of the great private universities of the country than to the newer development in American education, the great state university of the middle west, on whose pattern we have been consciously building since 1912. May the richness of our history, the devotion of our alumni, the generosity of our patrons, the culture of our faculty and the appreciation of fine things of our leaders, enable us to do the hitherto unaccomplished—to develop both quantity and quality at the same time.

Let John Do It

"Ratty" Ranson, that is to say, Lucius, the original "Ratty" boasted of a sore arm on Wednesday from his strenuous pitching in the alumni baseball game on Tuesday.

The only part of the commencement program which has ever tended to fail is that part which calls for athletic prowess in the sort of hot weather we have at commencement. It seems to be very difficult to persuade a commencement crowd to get out on Emerson Field and perform athletic stunts. Everybody is perfectly willing to come out and watch everybody else do it, but it is useless at such time to urge the duty of activity. Bob House said, when urged to do his duty upon a similar commencement occasion, that he denied any one's right to deprive him of a good time when he had one coming to him. I suspect this to be the philosophy of most commencement people, except those with such a conscience as a Frank Graham or such indefatigable energy as a "Ratty" Ranson.

A Touch of Breezy West

A touch of the breezy west was added to commencement by Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Heffner, who came from Arizona, where they have been doing missionary work in behalf of the "Kochomania" and, incidentally, acquiring quite a broad western brogue.

"Mike" Hasn't Changed

Every now and then, in a reunion crowd, you run across a man who looks so identically like he used to that it makes you feel right spooky. Such was my experience with Mike Dunningan, who looked for all the world just as he did when every Saturday night he used to read the names of those distinguished members of the Di Society who had been fined for non-performance of duty, fined again for failure to pay the original fine, and fined again for failure to pay the original with the accumulated fine.

Dix Reunion Schedule

To my mind nothing suggested in the way of alumni organization is so wholly good as the Dix schedule of reunions. The fun which I had in seeing the 1914 men back here was not shared by others in my class, because this was not our year for reunion; but under the Dix plan we will reconstruct at each reunion time the student body which was in college with us. According to the schedule in 1930, we will be freshmen again, with the classes of '13, '14, and '15 which were here with us in the fall of 1912. If we could all take our old rooms which we occupied that year, we could almost kid ourselves into believing that the world war has been a dream.

"Feet" Norris Back

No one whom I saw was more overwhelmed at the change in Chapel Hill than "Feet" Norris, who has been buried for the last eight years in the backward state of Florida, and did not know how much progress there was in the world until he came to Chapel Hill and got lost among the new buildings. Incidentally, "Feet" has made considerable progress of a very genuine sort, and Mrs. Norris was here with him.

Carolina Playmakers

Those who were wont to deplore the lack of artistic opportunity in Chapel Hill, had occasion to rejoice at the overflow performance of the Carolina Playmakers, and the ever present and very good entertainment offered by the University band and the University orchestra.

A Glint of Tragedy

The joys of commencement have been touched with a glint of tragedy for those who know the condition of Mrs. Cy Thompson, Jr., who was seriously injured in an automobile wreck in the outskirts of Durham on the night of Alumni Day.

Those Who've Retired

The Alumni register shows that most of those who returned were the usual run of teachers, lawyers, doctors, ministers, merchants, etc. There were some exceptions to this, however. It was a pleasure to find that some members of the classes finishing in the 80's are able now to mark themselves as "retired." Alma Mater must have given them a pretty good start to have kept them running successfully for forty years. Dr. J. Y. Joyner offers the unusual combination of "farmer-educator." Norman Shepard, who goes to China soon for the Standard Oil Company, reports his profession as "missionary." A graduate of 1923, at present a medical student in the University, voices a venom which will be understood by many when he denotes his occupation as "scientific slave."

Scattered Alumni Return

Just as in the 80's, North Carolinians left their home state for all sections of the country, so the out of state alumni reunion brought many of them back to Chapel Hill. They came from as far north as New York, as far west as Pasadena, California, as far south as Florida. Arizona, Tennessee, Alabama, Wisconsin, South Carolina, Virginia, and Dallas, Texas, were represented and many times on the register they signed up from New York, Baltimore, and Washington.

Judge Winston of Bertie

Commencement would hardly seem natural without Judge Francis D. Winston of Bertie, who is always selected to preside over the general reunion in Gerrard Hall despite the fact he insists every year that someone else share the honors. His infectious personality and ready wit always keeps the crowd in a happy humor. "I've been coming back here for forty-five years," he said as he introduced the class of 1904, "and for the first 25 years I wondered how I ever got my diploma, but when this class graduated I found out. I saw that if they could graduate anybody could."

Alex Graham Clog Dancing

Some alumni who visited the headquarters of the reunion class of 1869 in the infirmary found Alexander Graham, aged 86, clog-dancing in the middle of the floor. In a few moments he stopped clogging and began going through setting-up exercises. He told George Steele, '89, that was the way to keep young.

Test of Good Athlete

W. B. Fort, of Fremont, father of Mrs. Bob Fetzer, was telling some of his classmates of '61 that the test of a good athlete is his ability to kick a football over the South Building without touching it. He said he and some of his contemporaries were the first to introduce rugby at the University.

Judge Robert Winston

Judge Robert W. Winston, who was a sophomore again in the University this year at the age of 61, enjoyed telling the alumni at the business meeting of the Association how it felt to be seeing student life at close range again. "I come here every morning and see 2,500 boys," he said. "I know what they are going to do for this institution. I tell you North Carolina has just started. You are so near the picture you cannot see it. Come to Washington as I have and look back at it, your mother, and you will see of all the states in the Union, everybody has turned their eyes to North Carolina."

MANY UNIVERSITY ALUMNI NOMINATED IN PRIMARY

A large number of University alumni were nominated for public office in the State-wide primary held June 7.

The final majority of A. W. McLean, law '92, over J. W. Bailey for the Democratic nomination for Governor was declared to be 67,624, with McLean carrying 83 of the 100 counties in the State. The total vote was 151,197 for McLean to 83,574 for Bailey.

In the race for the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor J. Elmer Long, '05, was winner, under a campaign agreement with R. R. Reynolds, '06, that the leading man in the primary be declared the nominee. Long received 80,231 votes, Reynolds, 68,676, and Tam C. Bowie, '09, 62,086.

Graham Is Selected

In the contest for Attorney-General, Charles Ross, '05, lost to Dennis G. Brummitt, by a vote of 78,411 to 70,448.

W. A. Graham, Jr., was picked for Commissioner of Agriculture, piling up 92,561 votes as against 76,808 for Fred P. Latham, his nearest opponent.

Warren Gets Big Vote

Lindsay C. Warren, Law '08, was declared the nominee for Congress in the First District, he having a clear majority over the field of four candidates. Total vote, 24,065, giving Mr. Warren a majority of 1,939 votes over the field.

In the Fourth District Congressman E. W. Pou, '86, was nominated over Willie M. Person, '87, by a majority of 13,812.

In the Ninth Congressional district A. L. Bulwinkle, '05, was nominated over Dr. J. D. Dimmette, by a total of 21,980 to 1,269.

LOCKE CRAIG WAS CLOSELY IDENTIFIED WITH UNIVERSITY

Locke Craig, '80, former Governor of North Carolina, died at his home on the Swannanoa River on June 9 following a lingering illness of four years.

Locke Craig entered the class of 1880 at the age of 15, the associate of the Winston boys, Francis D. and Robert W., Chas. D. McIver, the latter to become the great educator; Edward A. Alderman, now President of the University of Virginia, and Charles B. Aycock, with whom later on he was associated in great events in State history. He was a diligent student and fond of speaking and writing essays and was chosen as commencement orator when his class was graduated while he was less than 20 years old, the youngest graduate of the University.

The young graduate had studied law, but lacking funds, took the place as assistant instructor in chemistry at the University for a year, teaching next year in a private school in Chapel Hill. It was in 1883 that he migrated to Asheville with the intention of practicing law, but here again for pecuniary reasons he taught school part of the time, being engaged at other times in the lumbering business, but at all times making friends of all with whom he came in contact.

JUDGE WALTER CLARK

Walter Clark, Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, died at his home in Raleigh on May 19, following a stroke of apoplexy. He was 78 years old.

Judge Clark had been Chief Justice of the Supreme Court for 22 years and for 16 years prior to 1903 an associate justice. Had he lived until August he would have past his seventy-eighth year and within a year would have rounded out two score years of judicial service, first as judge of the Superior Court for four years, then for 14 years on the Supreme Court bench as an associate justice, and finally for a quarter of a century as chief justice.

C. ALPHONSO SMITH

The University lost one of its most loyal and devoted friends in the death of Dr. Charles Alphonso Smith, noted educator and lecturer and head of the Department of English at the United States Naval Academy, who passed away at Annapolis, Md., on June 13, following a protracted illness. He was a native of Greensboro and was sixty years of age.

Dr. Smith had been at Annapolis since 1917, following eight years at the University of Virginia. Previously he had been head of the English department at the University of North Carolina and had been a member of the faculties of Louisiana State University and of Johns Hopkins. He was one of the best known English scholars in the United States and was widely recognized in his field.

In addition to his strictly academic work Dr. Smith was an author whose works, both technical and more popular, have attracted attention throughout the country.

Angus Wilton McLean, Law '92, who has been selected Democratic nominee for Governor.

A Trust Company as Executor Costs Less Than An Individual

This is an advertisement of carefully compiled facts and figures. It is of interest to you and your family because it proves beyond question that the experienced services of a Trust Company as Executor and Trustee cost less than those of an individual.

The figures are taken from the Returns as filed in the offices of Clerks of the Superior Courts of North Carolina. The figures:

	29 Estates Settled by Trust Companies	60 Estates Settled by Individuals
Gross Value.....	$2,642,053.03	$3,775,406.19
Average Size.....	100,000.00	50,000.00
Average Cost of Settling.....	3.65% of gross value	4.1% of gross value

These figures show that it costs the heirs of an estate $4.50 more per thousand to have the estate settled by an individual than by a trust company.

Hence, in addition to its other advantages over the individual Executor and Trustee a Trust Company has the advantage of economy.

Realizing its motto—"The Largest Service to the Largest Number," the Pilot Life Insurance Company of Greensboro, N. C., furnishes an insurance plan to meet every contingency—natural or accidental death; loss of earning power, by total or permanent disability, either through accident or by loss of health.

A Pioneer in Life insurance in the Carolinas, the Pilot Company has always put its Carolina earnings largely in Carolina banks and Carolina real estate mortgages, and so has assisted and does assist in North Carolina's progress.

In the same way, income from other Southern States is invested in those States. How much better it is, therefore, to place your insurance with a strong, sound, successful Southern Company.

Write for specialized advice on your problem and a Pilot representative will call.

FOR SERVICE TO UNIVERSITY STUDENTS, FACULTY AND ALUMNI

10 locomotives will take the place of 25

Electric locomotives draw long trains 650 miles over the Rocky Mountains on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul. Eventually most of the railroads in America will be electrified—engineers estimate that this will save more than a hundred million tons of coal a year.

The General Electric Company is electrifying the Mexican Railway between Orizaba and Esperanza. On the first section—with many curves and heavy grades—10 electric locomotives will take the place of 25 steam locomotives.

Economies resulting from electrification will repay the cost of the improvement within five or six years.
